Also you can download free PDF books This is my last class before exam. It's very important. Today's topic is DevOps. So I am going to write some questions and answer for you. For preparing MS or PhD after this exam we need to submit our exam. So you don't have to worry about MCAT. DevOps is a software development best practices and how web application development, people, and service delivery can be enabled by technology. DevOps is a software development practice where software developers build and release their own software. The idea is to create one continuous integration and delivery process which allows every developer to develop their code, run tests, see the results, and make the final release on a regular basis. DevOps is based on the two terms pipeline and cloud Pipeline is a shared assembly line for delivery software products to customers. DevOps is a combination of the software engineering, cloud computing, DevOps, container technology, software delivery, and cloud deployment. The basic steps and practices of DevOps are as follows: Build and deploy code to a test environment (virtual machine or cloud) with automation. Version the code and deploy to production. Continuously monitor the production system for production-quality and early release criteria. Integrate with other product systems or other teams. Analyze, compare, and improve existing product and systems. DevOps is much higher up in the service chain than a Dev or Ops team. This means that you can take a holistic approach to the complete DevOps life cycle (release, deployment, and operations). The full pipeline consists of the following five stages: Requirements Development Test Deployment Maintenance. Release : Software development releases are made from the so called "Constantly Integrating Pipeline" (CIP), an intensive process during which software is developed, tested, packaged, and distributed. This cycle is made possible by continuous integration (CI) and continuous delivery (CD). With CI and CD, developers and testers can monitor the progress of releases in real time. Continuous delivery helps ensure that builds are reproducible and reliable by integrating testing into a pipeline that is independent of any human intervention. Dev f678ea9f9e
